

My Magical Arctic Adventure!

Clumsily, I slipped on the sled, but I grabbed it and Blue started flying.

WOOSH! We flew into the pitch black sky through the Northern Lights. It felt freezing cold flying through the sky. It was stinging my chin and it was freezing up there.

I heard dogs behind me and following me. There was lots of howling which hurt my ears. In the forest, one of the huskies howled so loud it was ear splitting. It was like 'awoooooooooooh'. Over the high treetops, the jingling bells and the glassy icicles' chiming made the surroundings magical.

Mysterious green lights were twirling, dancing and pulsating around like ballerinas. I saw Blue flying above my head. I could see shimmering moonlight. Gigantic mountains in the distance were covered with the blanket of snow flakes.

On my entire face, I could smell snow. It smelt like freshness in the North Pole. I smelt a frozen blob of snow as gentle as a kitten's fur.

As calm as a quiet sea, I felt absolutely relaxed and comfy like I'm lying down on a bed. My whole body was aching but the snow was healing it with its coldness and the minty fresh air made me relaxed.

Softly, something touched my hand and it felt like Blue's paw. It felt gentle and I sat up...
