

My Arctic Adventure!

Suddenly, Blue whizzed up in the sky. My cheeks felt sore because they were freezing in the cold icy air. I was terrified and started shrieking. Petrified, I held onto the husky's velvety, fluffy ears so I wouldn't fall.

The bells on the huskies' red collar went 'ding dong, ding dong' and we kept going up in the bright cyan and blue sky. I could hear the howling huskies and the wind whistling in my ear. The icy leaves cracked and crunched when the sled hit the tall trees as we went up.

I could see the shimmering moonlight in the colourful, beautiful sky. Like gold and silver Christmas tinsel, the sky sparkled brightly. On the ground, there was lots of snow everywhere and it was all as white as soft clouds. As we went higher I could see the top of the pine trees pointing up. Tall mountains were far in the distance.

Like minty soap, I could smell the air and it was fresh. As we started going down, the smell of the pine trees around me was everywhere. Slowly, the huskies went down gently on the snow. I was freezing and my teeth were chattering, but I felt happy to be on the ground finally.
